Case No. 98-34108-psh12

1/14/99                      PSH                      published

The IRS objected to the debtor's proposed modified plan on the grounds that the plan, which provided for payment of the IRS's administrative expense claim in deferred payments made concurrently with payments to prepetition creditors, violated § 1226(b) (1). The IRS conceded that § 1222(a) (2) allowed the debtor to pay its administrative expense claim in deferred payments, but contended that the trustee could not make any payments to prepetition creditors until its administrative expense claim was paid in full.

The court held that the plan did comply with the provisions of 1226(b) (1). In doing so it noted that § 1222(b) (4) allows the debtor to pay any unsecured claim (which includes administrative expenses claims) concurrently with any other claim, secured or unsecured. Consequently, it held, §§ 1226(b) (1) and 1222(b) (4) when read together, unambiguously allow more than one concurrent payment to administrative expense claimants and to other creditors whereas the IRS's interpretation of § 1226(b) (1) would not. Thus it concluded that the Code allows the debtors to propose a plan which provides for payment of administrative expenses, over the life of the plan, concurrently with payments to secured or unsecured creditors.

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF OREGON

In Re: ) Bankruptcy Case No.
          ) 396-34108psh12
David Benjamin Ryan and ) Carol J. Ryan ) MEMORANDUM OPINION

This matter came before the court on the objection of the United States of America, through the Internal Revenue Service, (the "IRS"), to confirmation of the debtors' second modified Chapter 12 plan. The IRS contends that the proposed modified plan violates 11 U.S.C. § 1226(b)(1)<sup>1</sup> and that confirmation consequently must be denied.

The IRS holds two claims in this case, a secured claim in the amount of $106,934 and an administrative expense claim in the amount of $27,590. It is the latter which is the subject of its objection. It arose from the debtors' failure, between the filing date and confirmation of their first plan, to pay postpetition employment taxes as they came due. Although the bankruptcy case was filed on June 3, <sup>1</sup> All references to section numbers hereafter shall be to Title 11 unless otherwise specifically indicated.

1 1996, the IRS filed no request for payment of its administrative 2 expense claim until August 14, 1998. The debtors did not provide for 3 this claim in either of their earlier confirmed plans.

4 The administrative expense claim is treated in the debtors'
5 latest plan as being paid at the rate of $1,840 per month for the 6 months of November through March over a period of three years. The 7 plan also provides that during the three year period in which the 8 debtors are making payments to the IRS on this claim they will also be 9 making payments to prepetition secured creditors.

10 The IRS contends that the Bankruptcy Code forbids distribution
11 of payments to any of the debtors' prepetition creditors until all
12 administrative expense claims have been paid in full. The debtors
13 assert that the Code allows administrative expense claims to be paid 14 in deferred cash payments over the life of the plan concurrently with 15 deferred payments to their prepetition creditors.

16 ANALYSIS

17 The parties' arguments implicate §§ 1222(a)(2), 1222(b)(4), 18 1226(b)(1), 507(a)(1) and 503(b).

19 Section 1222(a)(2) requires that a plan:

20 provide for the full payment, in deferred cash payments,
21 of all claims entitled to priority under section 507 of 22 this title, unless the holder of a particular claim agrees to a different treatment of such claim;

23 Section 507(a)(1) states:

24 The following expenses and claims have priority in the following order:

25 (1) First, administrative expenses allowed under 26 section 503(b) of this title, and any fees and charges assessed against the estate under chapter 123 of title 28.

1 Section 503(b) states in part:

2 After notice and a hearing there shall be allowed administrative expenses . . . including— . . .

3 (B) any tax—

4 (i) incurred by the estate . . .

5 Section 1222(b) (4) states that a plan may:

6 provide for payments on any unsecured claim to be made
7 concurrently with payments on any secured claim or any 8 other unsecured claim;

9 Section 1226(b) (1), which governs distribution of payments by 10 the chapter 12 trustee, states:

11 (b) Before or at the time of each payment to creditors under the 12 plan, there shall be paid—

13 (1) any unpaid claim of the kind specified in section
14 507(a) (1) of this title;

15 The IRS concedes that § 1222(a) (2) allows the debtors to pay
16 administrative expense claims with deferred payments. Its agreement
17 with the debtors ends there. Additionally, it contends that the plain 18 language of § 1226(b) (1) dictates that any and all such deferred
19 payments made by the debtors' plan be directed toward payment of the 20 administrative expense claim until that claim has been paid in full.
21 In so interpreting § 1226(b) (1) the IRS focuses on the phrase "shall 22 be paid." It argues that "it is difficult to find a layman who does 23 not hear [that phrase] to require full payment." (IRS brief in support 24 of its objection to plan confirmation).

25 Contrarily, the debtors interpret § 1226(b) (1) with emphasis on 26 the phrase "before or at the time of each payment to creditors under the plan . . ." They believe that this language allows for payment concurrently with more than one payment to other creditors.

1           The IRS explains the statutory reference to "each payment" as 2 providing only for concurrent payments to creditors other than 3 administrative expense claimants when a periodic plan payment is 4 sufficient in amount to pay in full the balance of all administrative 5 expense claims and provide an excess for distribution to those 6 creditors. By way of illustration it likens distribution to 7 prepetition creditors to "the second pool in a waterfall flowing down
8 through two pools, where the second pool receives nothing until the 9 higher pool is filled to overflowing." (IRS brief in support of its 10 objection to plan confirmation.)

11           The IRS concedes not only that there appears to be no published
12 case law which supports its position, but that there are four published
13 cases in which the courts have held that administrative expenses need 14 not be paid in full before payments can be made to other creditors.
15 The cases are In re Shorb, 101 B.R. 185 (9th Cir. BAP 1989), In re
16 Teigen, 142 B.R. 397 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1992), In re Palombo, 144 B.R.
17 516 (Bank. D. Colo. 1992), and In re Parker, 15 B.R. 980 (Bankr. E.D.
18 Tenn. 1981). In fact, only one case, In re Parker,<sup>2</sup> directly addresses
19 the issue before this court. In Parker Judge Kelley analyzed each 20 relevant statute in turn. This court agrees with his logic, which 21 follows.

22           Section 1222(a)(2) addresses the treatment of priority claims
23 in chapter 12. They must be paid in "deferred cash payments."
24

25           <sup>2</sup> Parker is a chapter 13 case, but the content of the statutory provisions
26 the Parker court analyzes are identical to the chapter 12 statutes here implicated.

1 "Deferred" simply means made in more than one payment and, unlike the 2 required treatment of certain priority claims in chapter 11, made after 3 the effective date of the plan. The language of this section does not
4 address the division of payments between priority claims and all other 5 claims.

6 Section 1222(b)(4) does not mandate, but allows, a plan to 7 provide for payment on any unsecured claim to be made concurrently with 8 payment on any other claim, whether secured or unsecured. Priority
9 claims by definition include administrative expenses and are unsecured.
10 Consequently, administrative claims may be paid concurrently with 11 either other secured or unsecured claims.

12 Sections 1222(a)(2) and (b)(4) treat all priority claims
13 similarly. Section 1226(b)(1)<sup>3</sup> does not. It mandates that all 14 priority claims which constitute administrative expenses allowed under 15 § 503(b) and any fees and charges assessed under chapter 123 of Title
16 28 be paid at the same time as payments to other creditors. "This does 17 not mean that priority claims under § 507(a)(1) cannot be paid in 18 deferred cash payments. It means only that the trustee cannot make any 19 payment on the claims of creditors unless at the same time he pays
20 administrative expenses and fees or charges imposed by Title 28."
21 Parker at 983.

22 Contrary to the government's interpretation, § 1226(b)(1) does
23 not require the trustee to pay all administrative expenses in full 24 before making any payments to other creditors. Section 1226(b)(1) and

25 <sup>3</sup> In Parker the identical language in § 1326(b)(1) appeared in the Code at § 26 1326(a)(1).

1 § 1222(b)(4), when read together, unambiguously allow more than one
2 concurrent payment to administrative expense claimants and to other
3 creditors. Under its "two pool" analogy the government misreads §
4 1222(b)(4) to allow for only one possible concurrent payment. The 5 court is required, if possible, to construe the sections of a statute
6 in a way that will give meaning to both. United States v. Jackson, 84
7 F.3d 1154 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied ___ U.S. ___; 117 S.Ct. 445
8 (1996); Higa v. Transocean Airlines, 230 F.2d 780 (9th Cir. 1955), 9 cert. dismissed, 352 U.S. 802 (1956) ("[e]very part of a statute must
10 be construed in connection with the whole, so as to make all parts
11 harmonize, if possible, and give meaning to each.")

12 To further support its interpretation of § 1226(b)(1) the IRS
13 points to the legislative history of § 1326(b)(1). It states:

14 subsection (a) requires that before or at the time of 15 each payment any outstanding administrative expenses
16 [and] any percentage fee due for a private standing
Chapter 13 trustee be paid in full.

17 H. Rep. No. 95-595 95th Cong. 2d Sess. 430 (1978)

18 Sections 1222(b)(4) and 1226(b)(1), when read together, are 19 unambiguous. A court may resort to legislative history to aid in 20 statutory interpretation only if the language of the statute is 21 ambiguous. As these statutes, when read together, are not ambiguous, 22 the court may not consider the legislative history.

23 The court concludes that the Bankruptcy Code allows the debtors
24 to propose a plan which provides for payment of administrative 25 expenses, over the life of the plan, concurrently with payments to 26 secured or unsecured claims.
