After Nancy and Robert Mahler divorced, Debtor filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition. Plaintiff, Robert Mahler, filed a complaint against Debtor, her father, and her second husband alleging that the Defendants had converted various items of property belonging to the Plaintiff and seeking a money judgment. The complaint alleged that the Debtor's portion of the debt was nondischargeable. After trial, the court ruled in favor of the Defendants and the Plaintiff appealed.

The Plaintiff listed as error the court's admitting evidence during trial concerning the disposition of marital property other than the property mentioned in the complaint, evidence concerning passport fraud committed by Plaintiff, and evidence of Plaintiff's criminal conviction. The BAP held that the court did not commit error in admitting the complained of evidence. Evidence concerning disposition of marital property was relevant regarding the existence of an agreement regarding division of marital property. Evidence of passport fraud and of the criminal conviction was relevant with regard to Plaintiff's truthfulness and his propensity to testify truthfully. Because this was a bench trial, there was little chance that the trier of fact was prejudiced by introduction of that evidence.

1 After Nancy ("Debtor") and Robert Mahler ("Plaintiff")
2 divorced, Debtor filed a chapter 7² bankruptcy petition. Plaintiff 3 filed a complaint (the "Complaint") against Debtor, her father, and 4 her second husband alleging that the defendants had converted 5 various items of property that belonged to Plaintiff and seeking a 6 money judgment. The Complaint alleged that Debtor's portion of the 7 debt was nondischargeable under § 523(a)(6).

8 After a trial, the bankruptcy court ruled in favor of the 9 defendants, and Plaintiff timely appealed.

In July 1995, the Mahlers filed a pro se petition for divorce. The petition for dissolution of marriage provided that Debtor assumed liability for all debts and obligations incurred during the marriage. On August 14, 1995, the state court entered the Stipulated Judgment of Dissolution of Marriage, and the Mahlers were divorced effective September 8, 1995.³ The dissolution decree did not address division of the marital property.

On April 2, 1997, Debtor filed her chapter 7 petition. Plaintiff timely filed the Complaint, naming as defendants Debtor, ²Unless otherwise indicated, all chapter and section references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1330. All rule references are to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 1001-9036.

³Based on the testimony at trial, the bankruptcy court found that contrary to the representations made to the state court regarding irreconcilable differences, the Mahlers divorced in order to enable Debtor to adopt a child. Apparently, they believed that if they remained married, they would be unable to adopt a child because Plaintiff had a criminal conviction.

1 her father, John Reamer, and her second husband, Michael Harvey.
2 The Complaint alleged that Debtor "fraudulently, unlawfully, and 3 with intent to deprive him of his ownership interest therein, 4 transferred Plaintiff's undivided interest" in the following 5 property (the "Property"): (1) a 1982 Mercedes Benz; (2) a 1.5 6 carat diamond ring; (3) a set of 1 carat diamond earrings; (4) the 7 value of 35 firearms; and (5) a Macintosh computer. It also 8 alleged that Debtor retained a 50% interest in a parcel of real 9 property that she had not disclosed on her schedules. The 10 Complaint sought a determination that Debtor owed Plaintiff $28,250 11 and that this debt was nondischargeable under § 523(a)(6). The 12 Complaint also alleged that Reamer and Harvey had fraudulently and 13 unlawfully transferred the Property and sought a determination that 14 they owed Plaintiff $17,250. The Complaint requested that any 15 judgment be entered jointly and severally and that Debtor's portion 16 be nondischargeable.

17 After a trial on the merits, the bankruptcy court entered 18 judgment against Plaintiff.⁴ Plaintiff timely appealed the 19 Judgment.

21 II. ISSUES

22 A. Whether the bankruptcy court abused its discretion in 23 admitting evidence of the disposition of marital property 24 other than the Property.
25

27 ⁴Apparently, Plaintiff also alleged that the debt owed by Debtor 28 was nondischargeable under §§ 523(a)(2)(A) and (a)(15). However, at trial, the court granted motions to dismiss these claims. Plaintiff does not appeal that ruling.

1 B. Whether the bankruptcy court plainly erred in admitting 2 evidence of Plaintiff's passport fraud.

3 C. Whether the bankruptcy court plainly erred in admitting 4 evidence of Plaintiff's criminal conviction.

III. STANDARD OF REVIEW

7 A bankruptcy court's evidentiary rulings are reviewed for an 8 abuse of discretion and will not be reversed absent a showing of 9 prejudice. See Lake v. Capps (In re Lake), 202 B.R. 751, 756 (9th 10 Cir. BAP 1996).

11 We review the admission of evidence without objection for 12 plain error. See United States v. Gomez-Norena, 908 F.2d 497, 500-13 01 (9th Cir. 1990). "A plain error is a highly prejudicial error 14 affecting substantive rights." Id. (quoting United States v.
15 Yarbrough, 852 F.2d 1522, 1537 (9th Cir. 1986)).

17

IV. DISCUSSION

18 A. The Bankruptcy Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion in 19 Admitting Evidence of the Disposition of Property Other Than the Property.

20 In Oregon, conversion is defined as an "intentional exercise 21 of dominion or control over a chattel which so seriously interferes 22 with the right of another to control it that the actor may justly 23 be required to pay the other the full value of the chattel." 24 Morrow v. First Interstate Bank of Oregon, 847 P.2d 411, 415 (Or.
25 1993) (quoting Mustola v. Toddy, 253 Or. 658, 663, 456 P.2d 1004, 26 1007 (1969)). A debt for conversion may be excepted from discharge 27 pursuant to § 523(a)(6) if it is proven to be a debt "for willful 28 and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the 1 property of another entity." 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6). The Supreme 2 Court recently held that "the word 'willful' in (a)(6) modifies the 3 word 'injury,' indicating that nondischargeability takes a 4 deliberate or intentional injury, not merely a deliberate or 5 intentional act that leads to injury." Kawaauhau v. Geiger, 523 6 U.S. 57, ___, 118 S.Ct. 974, 977, 140 L.Ed. 2d 90, ___ (1998). The 7 Court noted that this was consistent with a prior holding that "not 8 every tort judgment for conversion is exempt from discharge.

9 Negligent or reckless acts . . . do not suffice to establish that a 10 resulting injury is 'wilful and malicious.'" Id. at ___, 118 S.Ct.
11 at 978, 140 L.Ed. 2d at ___ (quoting Davis v. Aetna Acceptance Co., 12 293 U.S. 328, 332 (1934)). Thus, Plaintiff had to establish that 13 Debtor, Reamer, and Harvey converted the Property with the intent 14 to injure Plaintiff.

15 During Plaintiff's cross-examination, Debtor's attorney asked 16 Plaintiff whether the Property included all of the marital 17 property. Plaintiff responded that there was other marital 18 property, and Debtor's attorney stated that he wanted to discuss 19 Plaintiff's recollection of the properties' disposition.
20 Plaintiff's attorney objected to this line of questioning as being 21 irrelevant because

22 [t]his is not a divorce court; it's not allowed 23 to disburse the assets of a dissolution 24 proceeding. The law in Oregon is that each 25 item of property becomes held by tenancy in 26 common between the parties, and it's not up to 27 this Court as a bankruptcy court to act or 28 attempt to adjust the equities between parties as though it were a dissolution court. . . .
If you allow them to go off in this direction,
I suppose that they will try to bring in what they think might be related to the properties, but if the property is only owned one-half by each party, that's true for today and it's true

1 after today no matter what the Court does, and 2 it's irrelevant for them to attempt to adjust 3 the values on other unrelated properties that aren't an issue in this case.

4 Tr. of Proceedings (July 22, 1998) at 31-32.

5 The bankruptcy court overruled the objection, finding that the 6 evidence was relevant to whether Plaintiff and Debtor had reached 7 an agreement as to the disposition of their marital property and 8 because the disposition of property other than the Property might 9 "shed some light on the boundaries of that agreement." Id. at 34.

10 By overruling Plaintiff's objection, the bankruptcy court 11 admitted the following evidence:

- 12 (1) Debtor and Plaintiff sold a parcel of land in Falls City (the 13 "Falls City Property") and initially received monthly checks 14 on the contract. After receiving monthly checks for one year, 15 Plaintiff assigned his interest in this property to a third 16 party.
- 17 (2) Debtor received $9,000 from the sale of the property on which 18 the Mahler's firearms store was located (the "Portland Road 19 Property").
- 20 (3) The Mahlers had owned a condominium in South Africa that was 21 transferred back to the seller in lieu of foreclosure.
- 22 (4) Debtor and Plaintiff owned a parcel of property worth $23,000 23 on East North Main adjacent to another parcel that they sold.
- 24 (5) The Mahlers had owned a parcel of property in Brummeria, South 25 Africa and some timeshares in South Africa that had been 26 forfeited.
- 27 (6) Debtor and Plaintiff had owned gold coins that Plaintiff 28 believed remained in Debtor's possession.

1 (7) During the marriage, Plaintiff purchased a .85 carat diamond 2 ring for Debtor that he believed she still had.

3 (8) Plaintiff had possession of a watch worth $3500.

4 (9) Plaintiff received the proceeds of a $7500 legal malpractice 5 settlement that belonged to him and Debtor by opening a bank 6 account in their names after the divorce without Debtor's 7 knowledge and depositing the settlement check into that 8 account.

9 On appeal, Plaintiff argues that by overruling the objection 10 to this evidence, the court's attention was diverted from 11 Plaintiff's case. Specifically, he contends that by admitting 12 evidence of the Portland Road Property and the Falls City Property, 13 the bankruptcy court was misled into believing that Plaintiff had 14 received a benefit from their sale and that this evidence was 15 irrelevant and served to prejudice the court against him. We 16 disagree.

17 Evidence is relevant if it has "any tendency to make the 18 existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination 19 of the action more probable or less probable than it would be 20 without the evidence." FED. R. EVID. 401. Relevant evidence is 21 admissible. See FED. R. EVID. 402. However, relevant evidence "may 22 be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by 23 the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or 24 misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue waste of time, 25 or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." FED. R. EVID. 403.

26 Debtor's evidence of the existence and disposition of marital 27 property other than the Property was relevant because it tended to 28 make it more likely that the Mahlers had an agreement regarding 1 division of marital property and distribution of proceeds.

2 Evidence of such an agreement would tend to show that Debtor did 3 not interfere with any interest of Plaintiff in the Property and 4 therefore was not liable for conversion. In addition, the 5 existence of an agreement, either implicit or explicit, regarding 6 disposition of marital property would make it less likely that 7 Debtor had the requisite intent to injure Plaintiff. Because this 8 evidence had a "tendency to make the existence of any fact that is 9 of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or 10 less probable than it would be without the evidence," this evidence 11 was relevant. FED. R. EVID. 401. Because it was relevant, the 12 evidence was admissible. See FED. R. EVID. 402.

13 Although admissible, relevant evidence may still be excluded 14 if "its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger 15 of unfair prejudice." FED. R. EVID. 403. "[P]rejudice which calls 16 for exclusion is given a more specialized meaning: an undue 17 tendency to suggest decision on an improper basis, commonly but not 18 necessarily an emotional one, such as bias, sympathy, hatred, 19 contempt, retribution or horror. These dangers appear likely to 20 arise only in jury trials and therefore rarely in bankruptcy 21 proceedings." HON. BARRY RUSSELL, BANKRUPTCY EVIDENCE MANUAL § 403.1, at 22 439 (1999 ed.). Indeed, the Ninth Circuit has noted that "in a 23 bench trial, the risk that a verdict will be affected unfairly and 24 substantially by the admission of irrelevant evidence is far less 25 than in a jury trial." EEOC v. Farmer Bros. Co., 31 F.3d 891, 898 26 (9th Cir. 1994).

27 There is no basis for finding that the bankruptcy court was 28 unfairly prejudiced by introduction of evidence regarding the

1 Portland Road Property or the Falls City Property. The bankruptcy 2 court determined that the debt was dischargeable after determining 3 that

4 [t]he divorce proceeding was part of a larger 5 agreement whereby they would terminate their 6 relationship on paper, but not otherwise. In 7 effect, they hid their relationship from 8 parties or any agencies that had a right to 9 know about it. But they would sort of stay together and afterwards they would either get back together as one exhibit suggests; or, as another one suggests, at least marshall and use their property together for the purpose of paying joint debts.

10 Now, subsequent to that, Mrs. Mahler and 11 perhaps Mr. Mahler had a change of heart with 12 respect to their relationship and made the 13 decision to go their separate ways. The 14 evidence suggests to me that there was . . . at 15 least an implicit agreement between them that 16 they would each take what they had and go his 17 or her separate ways. Mrs. Mahler's actions and testimony are consistent with that finding because she testified that what she took and sold she used to support herself, to pay legal fees, and thought that it was only fair in light of the fact that if she proceeded Mr.
Mahler retained about two-thirds of the total value of their property held in common.

18 I believe that Mr. Mahler's actions after 19 the fact and testimony are also consistent with 20 such an approach because he did not feel that 21 he was legally obligated to make any accounting 22 to the trustee in this bankruptcy for the value of the property that he held, which under the theory the Court's encouraged to adopt would have been subject to Mrs. Mahler's interest and therefore the interest of the bankruptcy trustee.

23 Tr. of Proceedings (July 22, 1998) at 167-68.

24 The transcript reveals that the bankruptcy court carefully 25 weighed the evidence and came to its decision after evaluation of 26 both Debtor's and Plaintiff's testimony and actions with respect to 27 the disposition of marital property. Based on this evidence, it 28 concluded that there was at least an implicit agreement with

1 respect to this property as established by the conduct of both 2 parties. Plaintiff does not challenge this finding on appeal.
3 There is no indication that the bankruptcy court decision was 4 improperly based and that Plaintiff was unfairly prejudiced.
5 Therefore, the evidence was admissible and the bankruptcy court did 6 not abuse its discretion in overruling Plaintiff's objection.⁵

7 B. The Bankruptcy Court Did Not Plainly Err in Admitting Evidence 8 of Plaintiff's Passport Fraud.

9 During Plaintiff's cross-examination, the following testimony 10 was admitted without objection:

11 Q (By Mr. Gunn) Mr. Mahler, in looking at 12 what's been marked for identification as 13 Exhibit 126, could you describe what that is.

14 A That is a South African passport.

15 Q Now, you've indicated the name on that 16 passport is not in fact your own but that of a 17 friend, is that correct?

18 A Yes.

19 Q And did you merely take his passport and 20 remove the photograph, or how did you falsify 21 this passport?

22 A He went down with me and helped me fill out 23 some forms to the U.S. passport -- not the U.S.
24 passport, the South African passport and walked 25 me through the procedure to get a passport, and 26 we used his I.D. to get a passport for me.

27 Q Do you remember if those forms required you 28 to state under oath that they were true and correct?

A Oh, I imagine they did.

Q And you simply disregarded that and signed it anyway, stating that your name was Mr. Van Der Merwe, if that's how you pronounce it, and as the passport has indicated you were born in South Africa and so forth?

A I signed the papers, yes.

26 ⁵We note that even if the court had abused its discretion in 27 admitting evidence of the disposition of the Portland Road Property 28 and Falls City Property, any error was harmless because there was ample evidence to support the court's conclusion that Debtor did not intend to injure Plaintiff.

1 Tr. of Proceedings (July 22, 1998) at 30-31. Debtor's attorney 2 then requested that the passport be admitted into evidence. The 3 court asked Plaintiff's attorney whether he had any objection to 4 its admission, and Plaintiff's attorney stated that he did not.

5 On appeal, Plaintiff argues that this testimony "diverted the 6 court's attention from material facts presented by Plaintiff" and 7 "[i]nflame[d] and prejudice[d] the court against Plaintiff."
8 Appellant's Opening Br. at 5-7. We disagree.

9 Plaintiff's failure to timely and properly object to the 10 introduction of this evidence at trial bars Plaintiff from raising 11 this issue on appeal unless plain error exists. See United States 12 v. Turman, 122 F.3d 1167, 1169 (9th Cir. 1997). Reversal under 13 this standard requires (1) an error, (2) that was plain, and (3) 14 that affected substantial rights. Id. at 1170 (citing United 15 States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 730-32 (1993)). Plain error "is 16 error that is so clear-cut, so obvious, a competent district judge 17 should be able to avoid it without benefit of objection." Id.
18 Plain error is absent here.

19 Federal Rule of Evidence 608 provides that 20 [s]pecific instances of the conduct of a 21 witness, for the purpose of attacking or 22 supporting the witness' credibility, other than 23 conviction of a crime as provided in rule 609, 24 may . . . in the discretion of the court, if probative of truthfulness or untruthfulness, be inquired into on cross-examination of the witness.

25 FED. R. EVID. 608(b). Here, on cross-examination, Debtor's attorney 26 inquired into Plaintiff's falsification of a passport. This 27 conduct was probative of Plaintiff's truthfulness because in 28 fraudulently obtaining a passport, Plaintiff lied under oath.

1 Evidence relating to a witness's participation in a fraudulent 2 transaction is probative of truthfulness. See United States v.
3 Jackson, 882 F.2d 1444, 1446 (9th Cir. 1989) (and cases cited 4 therein). Even if there had been error, there is no evidence to 5 establish that this testimony deprived Plaintiff of a substantial 6 right, particularly since this was a bench trial. See EEOC, 31 7 F.3d at 898. Thus, the bankruptcy court did not commit plain error 8 in permitting cross-examination regarding Plaintiff's passport 9 fraud.

10 C. The Bankruptcy Court Did Not Plainly Err in Permitting Cross-11 Examination Related to Plaintiff's Criminal Conviction.

12 During Plaintiff's cross-examination, the following exchange 13 occurred:

14 Q You indicated that there were two charges, 15 one had to do with a shipment of guns to South 16 Africa?

A Yes.

16 Q Were those automatic weapons?

A No.

17 Q And you indicated there was another charge; 18 that wasn't quite explored in its entirety.

What was the previous charge on that one?

19 A That was for the inaccuracies in the 20 paperwork at the gun store.

Q And were those automatic weapons?

A Yeah. They were sold to a police agency.

21 Tr. of Proceedings (July 22, 1998) at 41. Plaintiff's attorney did 22 not object to this line of questioning.

23 On appeal, Plaintiff contends that this questioning was 24 irrelevant to Debtor's bankruptcy case and was introduced solely to 25 inflame and prejudice the bankruptcy court. We disagree.

26 Federal Rule of Evidence 609(a)(2) provides that "evidence 27 that any witness has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if 28 it involved dishonesty or false statement, regardless of the

1 punishment." FED. R. EVID. 609(a)(2). On direct examination, 2 Plaintiff testified that he and Debtor had 3 a discrepancy in some paperwork involving 4 transfer of some firearms to a law enforcement 5 agency. At the time I was a reserve deputy for 6 them, and there was something not recorded in 7 an acquisition and disposition book, and being 8 one of the owners of the store we were 9 responsible for that paperwork not being 10 recorded properly.

11 Tr. of Proceedings (July 22, 1998) at 15. Plaintiff testified that 12 he had been convicted for this crime.

13 In interpreting Federal Rule of Evidence 609(a)(2), the Ninth 14 Circuit has held that "'dishonesty and false statement'" refers to 15 "'crimes such as perjury, false statement, criminal fraud, 16 embezzlement, or false pretense, or any other offense in the nature 17 of crimen falsi, the commission of which involves some element of 18 deceit, truthfulness, or falsification bearing on the accused's 19 propensity to testify untruthfully.'" United States v. Brackeen, 20 969 F.2d 827, 830 (9th Cir. 1992) (quoting FED. R. EVID. 609 advisory 21 committee's note).

22 Based on the evidence before us, Plaintiff's conviction for 23 keeping inaccurate records of transactions related to automatic 24 weapons appears to involve a false statement that bears on his 25 tendency to truthfully testify, and Plaintiff does not argue 26 otherwise. Evidence of a conviction involving "dishonesty or false 27 statement" is admissible without being subject to a balancing test.
28 FED. R. EVID. 609(a) (stating that such evidence "shall be admitted") (emphasis added). Because this evidence was admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 609(a), the bankruptcy court did not plainly err in allowing this testimony.

V. CONCLUSION

In sum, the bankruptcy court did not abuse its discretion in admitting evidence of the disposition of marital property other than the Property because it was relevant and not unfairly prejudicial.

Additionally, the bankruptcy court did not plainly err in permitting cross-examination of Plaintiff regarding a fraudulent passport because this conduct was probative of Plaintiff's truthfulness.

Last, the bankruptcy court did not plainly err in permitting testimony on cross-examination of Plaintiff's conviction for keeping inaccurate paperwork on transactions involving automatic weapons because this crime involved a false statement that bears on Plaintiff's propensity to testify truthfully.
