

In re Midgley, Case No. 05-30162

1/6/09

P08-9

Trustee made numerous demands on debtors seeking compliance with terms of their confirmed plan that required that they provide the trustee with copies of their tax returns. When the returns were finally provided, the trustee discovered that the debtors' gross income during the life of the plan far exceeded their projected income as shown on their most recently filed Schedule I. Thereafter, the trustee filed a modified plan seeking to recover some of the excess income for the benefit of unsecured creditors.

The debtors objected to the proposed modified plan, contending that § 1329 could not be used to modify a plan to increase or decrease the total amount to be paid to any creditor, except to the extent necessary to account for payments made outside the plan. The debtors further argued that the trustee was improperly seeking to compel them to pay actual, as opposed to projected, income into the plan and that the modified plan improperly incorporated the disposable income test of § 1325(b).

The court overruled all of the debtors' objections. It found that section 1329 permitted modification of a plan to change the amount to be paid to creditors based on a change in the debtors' post petition finances. It found that the proposed plan did not require payment of the debtors' actual income and did not improperly incorporate the disposable income test of § 1325(b).

Below is an Order of the Court.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF OREGON

In re) Case No. 05-30162-tmb13 ROBERT MIDGLEY and) KAREN MIDGLEY,) MEMORANDUM OPINION Debtors.)

This matter came before the court for hearing on October 22, 2008, on the Debtors' objection to the Trustee's modified plan. The Trustee was represented by Wayne Godare. The Debtors were represented by Rex Daines. I announced my ruling at that hearing. An order overruling Debtors' objection and approving the amended plan was entered on October 28, 2008.

FACTS

The facts in this case are undisputed. The Debtors filed a voluntary Chapter 13 petition on January 7, 2005. At the time of filing, Debtors filed a Schedule I. Current Income of Individual Debtor(s) and a Schedule J. Current Expenditures of Individual Debtor(s). The Debtors' Schedule I showed a gross monthly income of $9,534 which equated to a gross annual income of $114,408. The Debtors' net monthly income was $5,972. Their Schedule J showed monthly expenses of $5,517, leaving them with $455 per month in disposable income. Their plan, confirmed on March 17, 2005, required payment of $455 per month for 36 months.

1 The Order Confirming Plan and Resolving Motions (the “OCP”) required that the Debtors “report 2 immediately, upon receipt of notice of the change, to the trustee if actual or projected gross annual income 3 exceeds by more than 10% the gross income projected by the debtor in the most recently filed Schedule I.”
4 (OCP at ¶2) The OCP also required that the Debtors timely file all required tax returns and “provide copies 5 of all tax returns to the trustee each year immediately upon filing with the taxing authority.” (OCP at ¶3)

6 Despite the language of the OCP, the Debtors did not timely provide the Trustee with copies of their 7 2005 or 2006 tax returns. The Trustee requested the 2005 returns on November 11, 2006, and again on 8 February 9, 2007. He finally received the 2005 returns on March 8, 2007. The Trustee requested the 2006
9 returns on August 15, 2007, December 11, 2007, and February 1, 2008. He received those returns on March 10 12, 2008. Upon analysis, the Trustee determined that the Debtors’ gross income in 2005 was $150,781 11 (31% more than the gross income shown on the Debtors’ Schedule I) and their gross income in 2006 was 12 $154,301 (34.8% more than the gross income shown on the Debtors’ Schedule I.) Thus, in the first two 13 years of the plan the Debtors’ income was $76,366 more than shown on Schedule I.

14 The Trustee filed a modified plan on June 3, 2008. His purpose in filing the plan was to “capture a 15 dividend for debtors’ unsecured creditors based on debtors’ unreported increase in gross income for the years 16 2005 and 2006 totaling more than $76,000.” (Tr’s. Mem. in Supp. of Mod. Plan dated June 3, 2008). Under 17 the modified plan the Debtors’ monthly payments remained unchanged. However, paragraph 10 of the plan 18 provides that “[i]n order to account for unreported increased income received by the debtors during the first 19 36 months, debtors shall pay not less than $19,500.00 to the Trustee for distribution through the plan after all 20 obligations under the first 36 months have been satisfied.” (Notice of Post-Conf. Modif. of Plan and Am.
21 Ch. 13 Plan dated 06/03/08 at 4).

22 The Debtors objected to the modified plan on several grounds. First, they contend that the modified 23 plan is not authorized by the Bankruptcy Code. They further contend that the plan improperly requires that 24 they pay their actual disposable income to the plan rather than their projected disposable income. In 25 addition, they contend that the modified plan improperly incorporates the disposable income test of 11 26 U.S.C. § 1325(b).

1 LEGAL ANALYSIS

2 Modification of a Chapter 13 plan is governed by § 1329 of the Code¹. This section provided, in 3 relevant part:

4 “(a) At any time after confirmation of the plan but before the completion of payments under 5 such plan, the plan may be modified, upon request of the debtor, the trustee, or the holder of an allowed unsecured claim, to—

- 6 (1) increase or reduce the amount of payments on claims of a particular class provided for by the plan; 7 (2) extend or reduce the time for such payments; or 8 (3) alter the amount of the distribution to a creditor whose claim is provided for by the plan to the extent necessary to take account of any payment of such claim other 9 than under the plan.” (emphasis added)

10 According to the Debtors, subsection (a)(1) only allows a change in the timing or amount of 11 payments and not the total amount that a creditor will receive during the life of the plan. Under their 12 analysis, if a plan provides for a payment of $100 to a creditor at $2.00 per month for 50 months, 13 § 1329(a)(1) allows modification of the plan to pay the creditor two payments of $50 each, but does not 14 allow a modification that increases (or decreases) the total amount the creditor will receive. They contend 15 that this reading of § 1329(a)(1) is compelled by the language of § 1329(a)(3) and the canons of statutory 16 construction.

17 Subsection 1329(a)(3) specifically provided for modification of a plan to change the amount of the 18 distribution to a creditor to account for payments made outside the plan. According to the Debtors, the term 19 “distribution” as used in subsection (a)(3) is different from “payments” as used in subsection (a)(1). They 20 contend that “‘Amount of Distribution’ is the total amount a creditor will received [sic] throughout a case, 21 ‘Amount of Payments’ and ‘Time for such Payments’ is the manner in which the total distributions are 22 made.” (Debtors’ Mem. in Supp. of Obj. to Trustee’s Mod. Plan at 4). Ergo, they argue, the only time a 23 modified plan may change the total amount a creditor will receive under a plan is when that creditor has 24

26 Protection Act of 2005 (“BAPCPA”). All statutory citations to the Code refer to the pre-BAPCPA code unless otherwise stated.

1 received payments outside the plan. The Debtors acknowledge that their position, if adopted, would cut both 2 ways, i.e., just as a plan could never be modified to increase the amount to be received by an unsecured 3 creditor, except as provided in § 1329(a)(3), nor could it be modified to reduce that amount.

4 The Debtors cite no case law in support of this argument and I was unable to find any case law 5 directly on point. However, there are a number of cases in which the parties argued as to when a plan could 6 be modified to increase payments to a class of creditors, impliedly recognizing that such increases are 7 appropriate under § 1329(a)(1). See, e.g., In re Anderson, 21 F.3d 355 (9th Cir. 1994) (recognizing a 8 trustee's right to seek modification of the debtors' plan under § 1329(a)(1) should the debtors' income 9 increase); In re Than, 215 B.R. 430 (9th Cir. BAP 1997) (assignee of unsecured creditor's claim had standing 10 to file modified plan to increase payout to unsecured creditors); and In re Powers, 202 B.R. 618 (9th Cir. BAP 11 1996) (change in circumstances not necessary to justify a trustee's modified plan which increased debtor's 12 plan payments based on post petition increase in income.)

13 Debtors' argument flies in the face of common practice in this district. The courts in this district have 14 uniformly recognized that a debtor's fortunes may change for the worse during the life of the plan, making it 15 impossible for the debtor to complete the plan as confirmed. In such cases, courts in this district allow the 16 debtor to modify his or her plan in order to complete the plan and obtain a discharge. See also 8 Collier on 17 Bankruptcy ¶ 1329.02 (15th rev. ed. 2008) ("a debtor may wish to modify a plan for any number of reasons .
18 . . . The debtor's income may decrease, necessitating a reduction in payments.")

19 The Debtors argue that it is not necessary for the court to allow such downward modification. They 20 contend that if a debtor is unable, due to a reversal of fortune, to complete his or her initial confirmed plan he 21 or she may still obtain a hardship discharge under § 1328(b) or convert his or her case to one under Chapter 22 7. This argument ignores the fact that a discharge under § 1328(a) is broader than a discharge under either § 23 1328(b) or § 524. More importantly, a debtor may obtain a discharge under § 1328(b) only if "modification 24 of the plan under § 1329 . . . is not practicable." 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b)(3). Accordingly, I find that there is no 25 merit to the argument that § 1329(a)(1) cannot be used to increase or decrease the total amount of the 26 distribution a creditor receives under a plan.

1 The Debtors also take the position that modification of their plan to increase distribution to a class of 2 creditors is prohibited by the doctrine of res judicata. In In re Powers, 202 B.R.618 (9th Cir. BAP 1996), the 3 court addressed the issue of whether the doctrine of res judicata prohibited modification of a confirmed plan 4 absent a substantial change in the debtors' circumstances and concluded that it did not. In doing so, it noted 5 that the substantial change standard, required by some courts as a prerequisite to plan modification, "derives 6 from the belief that res judicata acts as a bar to modification of the plan" but concluded that "res judicata 7 does not apply when a contrary statutory purpose is evident." Id. at 622. The court went on to state: "[t]he 8 statutory framework of the Code assumes the possibility of post-confirmation modifications. Modification 9 pursuant to § 1329 provides a mechanism to change the binding effect of § 1327. Had Congress intended res 10 judicata to apply, there would be little or no reason for the existence of § 1329." Id. Accordingly, the 11 Debtors' res judicata argument is also without merit.

12 The Debtors contend that the Trustee's proposed plan would compel them to pay actual, as opposed 13 to projected, disposable income into their plan in violation of the holding in Anderson, supra. I disagree with 14 the Debtors' contention.

15 In Anderson, the trustee sought to compel the debtors to sign a Best Efforts Certification which 16 would allow the trustee to "determine the Andersons' actual disposable income by periodic review of their 17 financial status and then automatically adjust their payments." Anderson, 21 F.3d at 357. The debtors 18 refused to sign the certification and, as a result, the trustee objected to confirmation of their plan. The court 19 denied confirmation based on the debtors' refusal to sign the Best Efforts Certification and the debtors 20 appealed.

21 On appeal the trustee argued that the debtors should be required to sign the certification as a 22 prerequisite to confirmation because the projected plan payment "does not assure that the Andersons will pay 23 all actual disposable income during the life of the plan." Id. at 358. The court rejected that argument based 24 on its conclusion that § 1325(b)(1)(B) does not require a debtor to give assurance that he will pay all actual 25 disposable income into the plan over the life of the plan. Rather, it found, § 1325(b)(1)(B) only required that 26 the debtor commit to pay all projected disposable income, as calculated at time of confirmation, into the

1 plan.

2 The Anderson court left open the possibility that the trustee could seek a post confirmation 3 modification of the debtors' plan if their income increased, but held that "[t]he Trustee's efforts to force the 4 Andersons to agree to a periodic adjustment of their payments without a court order is inconsistent with the 5 procedures established for modifying a debtor's plan." Id. In other words, the holding of Anderson isn't that 6 a plan can never be modified to account for increases in the debtors' income, but rather that such 7 modification must be done in accordance with the provisions of § 1329, which is exactly what the Trustee 8 has done in this case.

9 Unfortunately, Debtors failed to disclose their increased income to the Trustee or timely provide him 10 with copies of their tax returns, both of which were required by their confirmed plan. Consequently, the 11 Trustee is now forced to file a plan to account for income the Debtors might have been required to pay had 12 the Trustee filed a modified plan at an earlier date.

13 The court addressed a similar issue in In re Wetzel, 381 B.R. 247 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2008). In 14 Wetzel, the debtors' confirmed plan required that they provide the trustee with copies of their post petition 15 tax returns. When the trustee received the returns he learned that the debtors' annual income had grown 16 from $36,350, the amount they projected at the time of filing in 2004, to $99,644 in 2005 and $136,705 in 17 2006. The trustee then filed a modified plan which provided for an increase in plan payments from $1,000 18 per month to $2,700 and to increase the number of payments from 36 to 60. The Debtors objected to the 19 proposed modification as untimely. The court rejected this argument, noting that the debtors "as far as the 20 court knows, did nothing to alert the Trustee [to the increase in their income] and therefore, cannot be heard 21 to complain when the Trustee gleaned the situation from tax returns." Id. at 251.

22 This case is more egregious than Wetzel in that it appears from the Wetzel opinion that the debtors 23 timely provided the trustee with copies of their tax returns and he simply failed to act on that information for 24 over a year. In this case by contrast, the Debtors ignored their obligation to provide the Trustee with tax 25 returns until he made repeated demands for those returns. In addition, there is nothing in Wetzel to suggest 26 that the debtors had an obligation to advise the trustee of increases in income, whereas the Debtors in this

1 case had such an obligation and chose to ignore it. Under these circumstances, the Trustee’s modification of 2 the Debtors’ plan was timely.

3 The Debtors further contend, citing In re Sunahara, 326 B.R. 768 (9th Cir. BAP. 2005), that the 4 proposed plan improperly incorporates the disposable income requirement of § 1325(b). In Sunahara, the 5 BAP held that “the plain language of § 1329(b) does not mandate satisfaction of the disposable income test 6 of § 1325(b)(1)(B) with respect to modified plans.” Id. at 781. However, while Sunahara recognized that 7 § 1325(b) is not applicable to modified plans, it did not hold that disposable income should not be considered 8 in determining whether to authorize a proposed modification. To the contrary, it held that while the 9 disposable income test is not directly implicated in a modified plan, “important components of the disposable 10 income test are employed as part of a more general analysis of the total circumstances mitigating in favor of 11 or against the approval of modification” Id. Thus, disposable income is one of many factors the court 12 may, and should, consider in determining whether to confirm this plan.

13 Debtors’ failure to comply with the terms of their plan with respect to providing tax returns and 14 advising the trustee of significant increases in income, combined with their apparent ability to pay more to 15 their creditors than they are currently paying, are factors that mitigate in favor of approval of the Trustee’s 16 proposed plan.

17 Section 1329(b)(1) provides that “sections 1322(a), 1322(b) and 1323(c) of this title and the 18 requirements of § 1325(a) of this title apply to any modification under subsection (a) of this section.
19 Sections 1322(a) and (b) govern the contents of the plan, i.e., it must provide for submission of future 20 earnings, payment of priority claims, designation of classes, etc. The Trustee’s proposed plan complies with 21 all of the requirements of §§ 1322(a) and (b). Section 1323(c) provides that creditors who have accepted or 22 rejected a plan are deemed to have accepted or rejected a modified plan unless their rights under the 23 modified plan differ from those in the initial plan. All objections to the Debtors’ initial plan were resolved.
24 No creditors are adversely effected by the modified plan. Accordingly, § 1323(c) is inapplicable here. That 25 leaves § 1325(a).
26

1 Section 1325(a) states:

2 “(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the court shall confirm a plan if—

- 3 (1) the plan complies with the provisions of this chapter and with the other applicable 4 provisions of this title;
5 (2) any fee, charge, or amount required under chapter 123 of title 28 [28 USC §§ 6 1911 et seq.] , or by the plan, to be paid before confirmation, has been paid; 7 (3) the plan has been proposed in good faith and not by any means forbidden by law; 8 (4) the value, as of the effective date of the plan, of property to be distributed under 9 the plan on account of each allowed unsecured claim is not less than the amount that 10 would be paid on such claim if the estate of the debtor were liquidated under chapter 11 7 of this title on such date;
12 (5) with respect to each allowed secured claim provided for by the plan—13 (A) the holder of such claim has accepted the plan; 14 (B)(I) the plan provides that the holder of such claim retain the lien 15 securing such claim; and 16 (ii) the value, as of the effective date of the plan, of property to be 17 distributed under the plan on account of such claim is not less than the 18 allowed amount of such claim; or 19 (C) the debtor surrenders the property securing such claim to such holder; 20 and 21 (6) the debtor will be able to make all payments under the plan and comply with the 22 plan.”

23 Section 1325(a) does not state “that the court shall confirm a plan only if certain requirements are 24 met. Instead, it states only that if its criteria are met the court must confirm the plan.” 8 Collier on 25 Bankruptcy ¶ 1325.01 (15th rev. ed. 2008) (emphasis added)(footnote omitted). The plan in this case meets 26 each of the criteria of § 1325(a).

27 As a final matter, I note that the Debtors contend that the Trustee breached his duties under the Code 28 in filing the modified plan. They argue that the Trustee’s only duty to unsecured creditors “is to promptly 29 distribute the money to which they are entitled” and that he has no duty to maximize distribution to 30 unsecured creditors. In fact, they argue that the Trustee has a duty to “assist the debtor in performance under 31 the plan.” Here, they contend, the modified plan “makes it more difficult for the debtor [sic] to complete the 32 plan.” (Debtors’ Mem. in Supp. of Obj. to Trustee’s Mod. Plan at 6). I disagree with the Debtors’ 33 contention that a Chapter 13 Trustee has no duty to creditors.

34 Under § 704, as incorporated by § 1302, the trustee has the duty to investigate a debtor’s financial 35 affairs. Section 1325(b) grants the trustee the power to protect the rights of unsecured creditors by objecting

1 to confirmation of a proposed plan unless the plan provides for full payment of all allowed unsecured claims 2 or commits all of the debtor's projected disposable income to the plan. Similarly, under § 1329(b) the trustee 3 has the right, under appropriate circumstances, to propose a plan which will increase payments to unsecured 4 creditors. See In re Kagenveama, 541 F.3d 868, 875 (9th Cir. 2008) ("if the debtor's income increases after 5 the plan is confirmed, the trustee may seek plan modification under § 1329.")² In fact, contrary to the 6 debtors' assertion, "the primary purpose of the Chapter 13 trustee is . . . to serve the interests of all 7 creditors." Andrews v. Loheit (In re Andrews), 49 F.3d 1404, 1407-08 (9th Cir. 1995). See also In re Hill, 8 268 B.R. 548, 555, (9th Cir. BAP 2001) ("the trustee is charged with serving the interests of all creditors, 9 secured and unsecured.")

10 The Trustee, after investigating the Debtors' financial affairs, concluded that they had the ability to 11 increase the distribution to unsecured creditors but had not done so. In light of that information, the Trustee 12 had an obligation to the creditors to file a modified plan which would maximize the distribution creditors 13 would receive. Accordingly, his actions in filing the modified plan breached no duty to the Debtors.

24 ² Kagenveama was decided under the Code as amended by BAPCPA. The BAPCPA modified 25 § 1329(a) to add a provision allowing a debtor to reduce amounts to be paid under the plan, under certain 26 circumstances, by the actual amount expended by the debtor to purchase health insurance. BAPCPA made no other changes to § 1329(a).
