Orchards Village Investments, LLC, Case No. 09-30893-rld11

Pub.

The debtor is an Oregon limited liability company which owns a partial interest in a senior living community; specifically, debtor owns 23.51% of the real property as a tenant in common and 72.51% of the building and improvements on the real property.

The Bank funded construction of the improvements; debtor was the borrower. Upon completion of the improvements, debtor leased its interest in the real property and improvements to a manager.

Operation of the senior living community did not generate sufficient funds for payment of the debtor's obligation under its construction loan agreement with the Bank, and neither the architect for the project nor the 2007 real property taxes were paid. The Bank initiated foreclosure proceedings in state court, and a receiver was appointed on August 22, 2008. The receiver continued to operate the senior living community and improved its cash flow. However, when the receiver initiated efforts to sell the senior living community to satisfy the secured debt on the property, the debtor, on February 13, 2009, filed a chapter 11 petition in an effort to obtain greater control over the sale process and attempt to obtain a return to the LLC investors.

The Receiver filed a motion seeking dismissal of the bankruptcy case, or alternatively, seeking to be excused from turning the senior living community over to the debtor as required by § 543. The Bank joined in the motion. The motion was opposed by the holders of 82.13% of the tenant in common interests in the real property.

Following an evidentiary hearing on the motion, the bankruptcy court determined that the appointment of the receiver in state court did not, in itself, preclude the debtor from filing the Chapter 11 petition. Article 1, § 8, Cl. 4 of the Constitution grants Congress the power to establish "uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States." Congress's exercise of this constitutional authority preempts and supersedes state insolvency laws. Congress specifically provided in the Bankruptcy Code that, unless excused from compliance by the bankruptcy court, custodians, including receivers appointed by state courts, were required to turn over and account for any estate property within their possession.

The bankruptcy court then turned to the issue of whether the debtor's manager had the requisite corporate authority under Oregon law to file the bankruptcy petition on behalf of the debtor. Because questions had been raised as to whether the manager had the consent of a majority of the debtor LLC's members when he filed the bankruptcy petition, the Bank and the Receiver argued that the filing of the petition was not properly authorized under Oregon law when it was filed in February 2009. Nevertheless, prior to the hearing on the motion to dismiss, a majority of the debtor's members signed consent resolutions ratifying the February filing of the bankruptcy petition. The bankruptcy court determined that the after-the-fact consent resolutions were effective to approve the filing of the petition retroactively.

Because the bankruptcy filing was not precluded by the existence of the receiver and was properly authorized under Oregon LLC law, the bankruptcy court denied the motion to dismiss on that basis. Further, while the court found the prospects for a reorganization dubious, the court found that it was in the best interests of the debtor to give the debtor an opportunity to propose and attempt to confirm a plan in chapter 11, which, at a minimum, would provide for an extended sale period which in itself possibly could be of some benefit to creditors and equity interest holders.

While it did not dismiss the case, the bankruptcy court granted the receiver its alternative relief and excused the receiver from compliance with the turnover provisions of § 543. In doing so, the bankruptcy court noted that the receiver had been in place since August 2008, and that the receiver had improved operations and occupancy at the senior living community. The bankruptcy court also acknowledged the receiver's concern that the bankruptcy filing could destabilize operations and upset residents and staff. Noting that mismanagement of the debtor was a factor in determining whether to excuse the receiver from the turnover requirements of § 543, the bankruptcy court stated that the evidence tended to indicate that the debtor's primary motivation was not to pay creditors but to protect the interests of equity holders. This is reflected in part by the fact that even when the debtor was in default of its loan obligations to the Bank, including the accumulation of nearly $300,000 of unpaid real property taxes, the debtor's manager had continued to make payments equating to an 11% return to some equity investors during 2008. In addition, the receiver never was able to obtain all requested financial records from the manager, and the debtor was unable to present to the court consistent records of its unit ownership.

Finally, because the receiver would continue to operate the senior living community, and because the debtor could not provide adequate protection for any use of cash collateral, the bankruptcy court denied the debtor's request for cash collateral use which was heard at the same time as the motion to dismiss.

Debtor.	)

On April 6, 2009, I heard evidence and argument at the final evidentiary hearing ("Hearing") on Pivotal Solutions, Inc.'s ("Receiver") Motion to Dismiss Bankruptcy Case, or in the Alternative, to Excuse Compliance with 11 U.S.C. § 543<sup>1</sup> ("Motion to Dismiss"), in which the Bank of Wyoming ("Bank") joined. At the Hearing, I also heard evidence and argument on the debtor Orchards Village Investments, LLC's ("Debtor") Motion for Interim Authority to Use Cash Collateral ("Cash Collateral Motion"). The Debtor, joined by the Burgess Family Trust, Henry's Orchards Village, LLC, and Sugarman's Orchard, LLC (collectively, the "TIC Investors"), opposed the Motion to Dismiss. The Receiver and the

1 Bank opposed the Cash Collateral Motion. Following the completion of 2 witness testimony, I closed the record.

3 Having carefully considered the parties' arguments in light of 4 the evidentiary record from the Hearing and relevant legal authorities, 5 this Memorandum Opinion sets forth the court's findings of fact and 6 conclusions of law under FRCP 52(a), applicable with respect to these 7 contested matters under FRBP 9014 and 7052.

8 Factual Background

9 Orchards Village is a senior living community, located in Clark 10 County, Washington. Orchards Village provides independent living, 11 assisted living and memory care services to its residents. Orchards 12 Village has approximately 80 elderly residents, living in a combination 13 of independent living, assisted living and memory care units.

14 Orchards Village is owned as follows:

Owner	Real Property Percentage Owned as Tenants in Common	Building/ Improvements Percentage Owned
17 Debtor	23.51%	72.51%
18 Henry's Orchards Village, LLC	20.36%	0.00%
19 Sugarman's Orchard, LLC	28.64%	0.00%
Carburton Properties 8, LLC	17.87%	17.87%
Burgess Family Trust	9.62%	9.62%
20 TOTALS	100.00%	100.00%

21 The Debtor entered into a Construction Loan Agreement, 22 Promissory Note, and Construction and Permanent Deed of Trust and 23 Security Agreement and Fixture Filing, for the funding of construction of 24 Orchards Village on or about September 28, 2005 with First State Bank of 25 Thermopolis, the Bank's predecessor in interest. The original amount of 26 the loan financing ("Loan") was $11,550,000. Thereafter, Orchards

1 Village was duly constructed, and all parties agree that it is an 2 excellent, generally well-maintained facility of its type.

3           The Debtor leased its interest in the real property and 4 improvements to Orchards Village Properties, LLC ("OVP"), pursuant to a 5 Commercial Lease (the "Lease") dated June 1, 2005, with an original term 6 of 15 years. The Receiver has not rejected the Lease. OVP's agent for 7 management of Orchards Village under the Lease was Farmington Centers, 8 Inc. ("Farmington"), under a Management Agreement ("Management 9 Agreement").

10           The Debtor ultimately was unable to pay its Loan obligations to 11 the Bank. On February 8 and March 21, 2008, counsel for the Bank sent 12 notices of default to the Debtor, advising of the following Loan 13 defaults: 1) failure to make the January 20 and February 20, 2008 Loan 14 installment payments; 2) failure to pay real property taxes, interest and 15 penalties for the 2007 tax year totaling $106,840; and 3) failure to pay 16 LRS Architects, resulting in a mechanics lien being placed on the 17 Orchards Village property and a lien foreclosure action being commenced.
18 Significantly, during the period of the Debtor's default of its Loan 19 obligations to the Bank, Farmington continued to make distributions to 20 some of the Debtor's equity investors. Debtor's Loan defaults are on-21 going and uncured.

22           On July 10, 2008, in light of the Debtor's Loan defaults, the 23 Bank sent a Notice of Acceleration to the Debtor, Farmington and 24 guarantors of the Loan. On July 11, 2008, the Bank filed a Complaint in 25 the Clark County, Washington Superior Court ("Washington Superior Court")
26 against the Debtor, OVP, Farmington, the TIC Investors and others

1 requesting the following relief: 1) foreclosure of the Bank's security 2 interests in the Orchards Village real and personal property and the 3 Management Agreement; 2) money damages for breach of the Loan agreements; 4 3) appointment of a receiver; and 4) an accounting.

5           On July 31, 2008, the Bank moved for an order appointing a 6 general receiver for the Debtor, OVP and the TIC Investors. The Receiver 7 was proposed as general receiver because of its extensive experience 8 serving as a receiver for many types of properties and businesses, 9 including its experience as a receiver for assisted living communities.
10 On August 22, 2008, the Washington Superior Court entered its Order 11 Appointing General Receiver ("Appointment Order"), appointing the 12 Receiver as general receiver for the Debtor, OVP, the TIC Investors and 13 Carburton Properties 8, LLC ("Carburton") and their respective assets and 14 business operations.

15           Upon its appointment as general receiver under the Appointment 16 Order, the Receiver negotiated and entered into an Occupancy and Services 17 Agreement with Regency Pacific, Inc. ("Regency"). When the Occupancy and 18 Services Agreement was entered into, OVP relinquished its license to 19 operate Orchards Village, and the Washington Department of Social and 20 Health Services ("DSHS") issued a provisional license to Regency to 21 operate Orchards Village.

22           Since that time, Regency has been operating Orchards Village 23 under the supervision of the Receiver. By all accounts, the operations 24 of Orchards Village by Regency under the supervision of the Receiver have 25 improved materially over operations by Farmington under the Management 26 Agreement. Since the Receiver took over management of Orchards Village,

1 there is a registered nurse full-time at the facility; the food service 2 has improved, with increased options for Orchards Village residents; and 3 there are a full-time activity director and bus driver at the facility.
4 In addition, occupancy at Orchards Village has increased as a result of 5 increased marketing efforts by the Receiver.

6 Under the Appointment Order, if income from operations is 7 inadequate to fund Orchards Village operations fully, the Bank is 8 required to lend any funds required to cover the shortfall to the 9 Receiver. During the first two months of Receiver operations, the Bank 10 advanced a total of $91,935.26 to cover costs of Orchards Village 11 operations. No further such loans have been required, and $75,000 was 12 repaid to the Bank by the Receiver in February 2009.

13 The Receiver has initiated efforts to sell Orchards Village, 14 and the equity investors in Orchards Village became concerned that a sale 15 would be approved in the receivership that would pay secured debt in full 16 but leave a shortfall to unsecured creditors and pay nothing to equity 17 holders. These concerns culminated in the Debtor's chapter 11 bankruptcy 18 filing on February 13, 2009. The Receiver filed the Motion to Dismiss on 19 February 17, 2009, and the Debtor filed the Cash Collateral Motion later 20 on the same day. I scheduled the Hearing at a preliminary hearing on 21 February 20, 2009.

22 Jurisdiction

23 I have core jurisdiction to decide the Motion to Dismiss and 24 the Cash Collateral Motion under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1334 and 157(b)(2)(A), (E)
25 and (M).
26

1 bankruptcy filing without the Receiver's consent, which was not given.

2 The Appointment Order provides in relevant part that:

3 3. The Receivership Defendants and their members, 4 managers, partners, officers, agents, employees, 5 representatives, trustees, beneficiaries, and 6 attorneys are hereby prohibited from:

7 (a) Interfering with the Receiver, 8 directly or indirectly, in the management and 9 operation of the Receivership Defendants' assets and 10 operations, or otherwise directly or indirectly taking 11 any actions or causing any such action to be taken 12 which would dissipate the assets or negatively affect 13 the operations of the Receivership Defendants;

14 (b) Expending, disbursing, transferring,
15 assigning, selling, conveying, devising, pledging, 16 mortgaging, creating a security interest in, or 17 otherwise disposing of the whole or any part of the 18 Receivership Defendants' assets and the proceeds 19 thereof; and

20 (c) Doing any act which will, or which 21 will tend to, directly or indirectly, impair, defeat, 22 prevent, or prejudice the preservation of the 23 Receivership Defendants' assets and operations.

24 7. Unless and until otherwise ordered by the Court, 25 the Receiver shall be a general receiver with 26 exclusive possession and control over the assets and the business of the Receivership Defendants with the power, authority, and duty to preserve, protect, and liquidate such assets during the pendency of this case. This authority includes, without limitation, the following:

(a) the authority to sell all of the real and personal property of the Receivership Defendants;

(b) the authority to incur and pay when due all expenses incurred by the Receivership Defendants in the ordinary course of business, to the extent they accrue after the Receiver's appointment;

(c) the authority to pay any and all other expenses, regardless of when the debt was incurred, that the Receiver determines in good faith are necessary or beneficial to the operation or winding down of the Receivership Defendants' business operations and the liquidation of the Receivership Defendants' assets.

The Receiver shall have exclusive possession and control over all assets of the Receivership Defendants (subject to the rights of secured creditors, including

1 created by one State's imprisoning of debtors who had been discharged
2 (from prison and of their debts) in and by another State." Central Va.
3 Community College v. Katz, 546 U.S. 356, 363 (2006). When Congress 4 exercises its constitutional authority to adopt bankruptcy laws, "it 5 preempts and supersedes all state bankruptcy and insolvency laws and 6 other state law remedies that might interfere with the uniform federal 7 bankruptcy system." In re Corporate and Leisure Event Productions, Inc., 8 351 B.R. 724, 728 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2006), citing Sturges v.
9 Crowninshield, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 122 (1819).

10 As noted by the bankruptcy court during the course of an in-11 depth historical analysis in In re Corporate and Leisure Event 12 Productions, Inc., "in the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, ...Congress...amended 13 the Judiciary Act of 1793 to expressly permit federal district courts 14 sitting in bankruptcy to stay proceedings in state courts." 351 B.R. at 15 729. In Struthers Furnace Co. v. Grant, 30 F.2d 576, 577 (6th Cir.
16 1929), the Sixth Circuit interpreted that grant of authority to conclude 17 that state court receivership orders cannot preclude debtors from seeking 18 relief in bankruptcy, even though the debtor in Struthers Furnace Co. had 19 consented to the receivership that had been pending for more than two 20 years, and the state court had "issued the usual injunction against 21 interference." Also see, e.g., Merritt v. Mt. Forest Fur Farms of Am., 22 Inc., 103 F.2d 69, 71 (6th Cir. 1939); In re Klein's Outlet, Inc., 50 F.
23 Supp. 557, 559 (S.D.N.Y. 1942) ("The appointment by a state court of a 24 permanent receiver with full power to act for the corporation does not 25 affect the right of directors to act on behalf of the corporation in 26 federal bankruptcy proceedings.").

1 This "common law" interpretation was incorporated by statute by 2 Congress "when the Chandler Act of 1938 made explicit [in § 2a(21) of the 3 Bankruptcy Act of 1939] that a bankruptcy case would ordinarily supersede 4 a state receivership and that a state receiver would ordinarily be 5 required to turn over the estate assets to a debtor in possession or 6 trustee." In re Corporate and Leisure Event Productions, Inc., 351 B.R.
7 at 732. The successor provision in the Bankruptcy Code, § 543, generally 8 requires that a state court receiver "shall...deliver to the trustee [or 9 debtor-in-possession] any property of the debtor held by or transferred 10 to" such receiver. § 543(b)(1).

11 In In re Corporate and Leisure Event Productions, Inc., the 12 bankruptcy court denied the state court receiver's motion to dismiss, 13 based on the alleged lack of authority of the corporation's principals to 14 file a bankruptcy petition in its behalf, in spite of the provisions of 15 the receivership order that 1) authorized the receiver to remove "any 16 director, officer, independent contractor, employee or agent of any of 17 the Receivership Defendants, from control, management of, or 18 participation in, the affairs of the Receivership Defendants;" 2) 19 enjoined the Receivership Defendants from acting to interfere with the 20 receiver's custody and management of receivership assets; and 3) further 21 specifically enjoined them from filing "any petition on behalf of the 22 Receivership Defendants for relief under the United States Bankruptcy 23 Code...without prior permission from" the state court. Id. at 726-27.
24 However, while denying the receiver's "first motion to dismiss," the 25 bankruptcy court made clear that its ruling was without prejudice to its 26 consideration of the receiver's further motion to dismiss based on "bad

1 faith" grounds, the receiver's motion to abstain or suspend, and the 2 competing motions for turnover and to excuse turnover of the debtor's 3 assets. Id. at 727 n.6 and 733.

4 In support of their argument, the Receiver and the Bank rely 5 primarily on Oil & Gas Co. v. Duryee, 9 F.3d 771 (9th Cir. 1993), and 6 there is some support for their argument in the Ninth Circuit's opinion 7 in Duryee.

8 [T]he state court order appointing Fabe as Oil & Gas's 9 rehabilitator said "[t]he Rehabilitator shall have all 10 the powers of the directors, officers, and managers of 11 Defendant, whose authorities are hereby suspended."
12 Order Appointing Rehabilitator, ER 8, exh. 1.

13 The only person, then, who could go to 14 court on behalf of Oil & Gas was Fabe. And he not 15 only failed to authorize these actions; he opposed 16 them. Therefore, when Becker-Jones [the former 17 president of Oil & Gas] purported to file the 18 bankruptcy petition on behalf of Oil & Gas, he was an 19 impostor; his action was null and void....We therefore 20 remand to the district court for dismissal of the 21 petition as fraudulently filed.

22 Id. at 773.

23 However, Duryee is not dispositive and is distinguishable from 24 the case before me for three reasons: First, as a substantive matter, the 25 debtor in Duryee was an insurance company and was not eligible for 26 bankruptcy relief under § 109(b)(2). The Ninth Circuit agreed with this 27 conclusion of the bankruptcy court at the trial level and the district 28 court on appeal. Id.

29 Second, the debtor's bankruptcy petition was filed by its 30 "former president." Id. at 772. Nothing in the Duryee decision gives 31 any indication as to what authority the debtor's "former president" would 32 have to file a bankruptcy petition in behalf of the debtor corporation,

1 whether or not there was a receiver or "rehabilitator" in the picture.

2 Finally, the appellant in Duryee never even addressed the 3 authority issue in order to make an adequate record at any level:

4 [O]ur mysterious appellant tried to sweep the issue
5 under the rug. Fabe raised the lack of authority 6 issue in his motion for a temporary restraining order
7 in Ohio state court, Tr. exh. 3 at 3, but there was no
8 response. Fabe again raised the issue in his motions 9 to dismiss the bankruptcy petition, Tr. exh. 8 at 24, 10 and the appeal to the district court; still no 11 response. Finally, the State of Illinois briefed the 12 issue for this court, but the mystery appellant did 13 not file a reply brief, and when questioned at oral 14 argument [counsel] offered no legal basis for his 15 client's authority to act on behalf of Oil & Gas.

16 Id. at 773. In that vacuum, the Ninth Circuit determined that the 17 debtor's bankruptcy petition was filed "fraudulently" and remanded the 18 case for imposition of sanctions. See also Chitex Communication, Inc. v.
19 Kramer, 168 B.R. 587, 589-91 (S.D. Tex. 1994) (In the context of an 20 apparently difficult divorce proceeding, the district court affirmed the 21 bankruptcy court's decision to abstain and dismiss a chapter 11 22 bankruptcy case filed in behalf of the debtor corporation by the 23 husband/president/managing co-owner on two grounds: lack of authority to 24 file and lack of good faith.); In re Crescent Capital Partners, L.P., 25 Bankruptcy Court for the Central District of California case no. SA05-26 14215JR (Unpublished Aug.26, 2005) (In an apparent battle between the two 50% members of the limited liability company general partner in a limited partnership, the bankruptcy court, considering state law to be controlling, granted a motion to dismiss a chapter 11 case filed in behalf of the limited partnership as not authorized in light of the breadth of the Order Appointing Receiver.).

1           Considering the cited authorities in light of the general 2 turnover and accounting requirements for "custodians" in § 543, including 3 receivers pursuant to § 101(11)(A), I agree with the bankruptcy court's 4 analysis in In re Corporate and Leisure Event Productions, Inc. and 5 conclude that a state court receivership proceeding cannot be used to 6 preclude a debtor from seeking federal bankruptcy protection, in spite of 7 the broad authority granted to receivers in their appointment orders, 8 such as the Appointment Order in this case. Allowing terms dictated in a 9 state receivership or insolvency proceeding to determine the availability 10 of federal bankruptcy relief is fundamentally inconsistent with the 11 constitutional grant to Congress of the right to enact uniform laws on 12 the subject of bankruptcy. Accordingly, I reject the argument of the 13 Receiver and the Bank that the Debtor's bankruptcy filing must be 14 dismissed because the Debtor's Manager and members had no authority to 15 file in light of the broad grant of authority to the Receiver under the 16 terms of the Appointment Order.

17 b) As a matter of limited liability company law, the Debtor's bankruptcy
18 filing was authorized under the forgiving standards of the Debtor's Operating Agreement.

19           The Debtor is an Oregon limited liability company ("LLC"). As 20 I noted in In re Avalon Hotel Partners, LLC, 302 B.R. 377, 380 (Bankr. D.
21 Or. 2003):

22           LLCs are hybrid business entities, with attributes 23 both of corporations and partnerships. They provide 24 their equity holders or "members" with the liability 25 shield of corporations while giving them the benefit 26 of partnership tax treatment. (citation omitted).
Oregon LLCs are governed by the provisions of Oregon Revised Statutes ("ORS") Chapter 63 and by the terms of their organizational documents, their Articles of Organization and Operating Agreements.

1           ORS § 63.130(4)(f) provides:

2           Unless otherwise provided in the articles of 3           organization or any operating agreement, the following 4           matters of a member-managed or a manager-managed 5           limited liability company require the consent of a 6           majority of the members:...(f) The conversion of the 7           limited liability company into any other type of 8           entity.

9           In the Avalon case, I concluded that the filing of a chapter 11 petition 10          converted an LLC into another type of entity--a debtor-in-possession, 11          bearing the fiduciary duties of a trustee in bankruptcy under § 1107(a).
12          302 B.R. at 380-81. Accordingly, an LLC decision to file a chapter 11
13          bankruptcy petition requires the consent of a majority of the LLC's 14          members under Oregon law.

15                 The Debtor is a manager-managed LLC. However, consistent with 16          the requirement of ORS § 63.130(4)(f), Section 4.10(4) of the Debtor's 17          Operating Agreement provides:

18                 Each Manager shall not have the authority to, and 19                 covenants and agrees that it shall not, do any of the 20                 following acts without the consent of a Majority of 21                 the Ownership Units:...(4) Cause the LLC to 22                 voluntarily take any action that would cause 23                 Bankruptcy of the LLC....

24          Exhibit 142, at p. 11.

25                 The Debtor's chapter 11 petition was signed by Mr. Jeffrey 26          Chamberlain, Farmington's President, as Manager. Exhibit 159, at p. 3.
27          However, under Oregon law and the Debtor's Operating Agreement, he had no 28          authority to file a bankruptcy petition in the Debtor's behalf without 29          the consent of a majority of the Debtor's member ownership interests.

30                 The record reflects that members of the Debtor met on a number 31          of occasions in October and November 2008 to discuss options for Orchards

1 Village, including the possibility of a chapter 11 filing. See Exhibits
2 144-49. No contemporaneous documentation approving Mr. Chamberlain's 3 signing and filing the Debtor's chapter 11 petition on February 13, 2009
4 has been provided. However, consent resolutions ("Consent Resolutions"), 5 purportedly signed in behalf of 78.76% of the Debtor's members during 6 March 2009, have been submitted ratifying the actions of Mr. Chamberlain 7 as Manager in signing and filing the Debtor's chapter 11 petition, 8 effective November 20, 2008. See Exhibit 200.

9           There is nothing in ORS Chapter 63 that precludes the members 10 of an LLC from approving actions by consent resolution, whether executed 11 before the subject action or ratifying the subject action after the fact, 12 as apparently occurred in this case. I confirmed the effectiveness of 13 such after-the-fact consent resolutions to approve a chapter 11 filing in 14 the Avalon decision. 302 B.R. at 381.

15           The Bank and the Receiver question whether the Consent 16 Resolutions in fact were approved by a majority of the Debtor's ownership 17 units.<sup>2</sup> Neither the Debtor's LLC counsel, Mr. James Oberholtzer, in his 18 testimony nor Debtor's chapter 11 counsel in argument could explain the 19

20           <sup>2</sup> The Bank's standing as a creditor to argue that the Debtor has not 21 met LLC governance requirements for approval of the Debtor's bankruptcy 22 filing, that were not designed to protect creditor interests, is 23 questionable. However, the Receiver stands on a different footing.
24 Under Washington law, the Receiver is an officer of the court, "acting 25 under its direction for the benefit of all parties in interest." State 26 ex rel. Ewing v. Morris, 120 Wash. 146, 153, 207 P. 18 (Wash. 1922)
(internal statutory citation omitted). See Gloyd v. Rutherford, 62 Wash.
2d 59, 60-61 (Wash. 1963) (internal citations omitted). The Receiver accordingly acts for the benefit of equity as well as creditor interests and has standing to raise the question of the appropriate exercise of LLC authority in this case.

1 inconsistencies with respect to the Debtor's member ownership records 2 reflected in the exhibits admitted at the Hearing. Compare Exhibits 201; 3 151; 159, at p. 8; and 160, at p. 6. However, Mr. Oberholtzer testified 4 that as of the effective date of the Consent Resolutions, Exhibit 201 5 accurately reflects who the Debtor's members are and their respective 6 units owned. Comparing that record with the numbers of units owned and 7 their respective ownership percentages, as specified in the Consent
8 Resolutions (see Exhibit 200), even though the unit ownership numbers 9 specified in the Consent Resolutions do not coincide entirely with the 10 unit ownership numbers set forth in Exhibit 201, I conclude that the 11 Consent Resolutions were approved by a majority of the Debtor's ownership 12 units. I further note that no member of the Debtor joined in the Motion 13 to Dismiss. Under the forgiving standard for approval by the Debtor's 14 members of a bankruptcy filing by the Debtor, and in spite of the 15 obviously sloppy LLC record keeping by the Debtor (which I will address 16 in another context infra), I find that the Debtor's chapter 11 filing was 17 properly authorized as a matter of LLC law by the Debtor's members.

18 c) Dismissal is not appropriate at this time, but neither is turnover.

19 As noted above, the Receiver and the Bank are requesting that I 20 abstain and dismiss this case pursuant to § 305(a). They also seek 21 dismissal for "cause" under § 1112(b), although they do not focus on any 22 of the specific "causes" identified in § 1112(b)(4).

23 Dismissal pursuant to § 305(a) is an extraordinary remedy, in 24 part because it is generally not appealable beyond the level of the 25 District Court or, in the Ninth Circuit, the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel.
26 § 305(c); In re Eastman, 188 B.R. 621, 624 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts

1 have suggested a number of factors that appropriately should be 2 considered in evaluating whether to abstain and dismiss a bankruptcy 3 case.

4 Such factors generally include: (1) economy and 5 efficiency of administration; (2) whether another 6 forum is available to protect the interests of both 7 parties or there is already a pending proceeding in a 8 state court; (3) whether federal proceedings are 9 necessary to reach a just and equitable solution; (4) 10 whether there is an alternative means of achieving the 11 equitable distribution of assets; (5) whether the 12 debtor and the creditors are able to work out a less 13 expensive out-of-court arrangement which better serves 14 all interests in the case; (6) whether a non-federal 15 insolvency has proceeded so far in those proceedings 16 that it would be costly and time consuming to start 17 afresh with the federal bankruptcy process; and (7) 18 the purpose for which bankruptcy jurisdiction has been 19 sought.

20 In re Fax Station, Inc., 118 B.R. 176, 177 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1990).

21 However, ultimately, "dismissal is appropriate under § 305(a)(1) only in 22 the situation where the court finds that both 'creditors and the debtor' 23 would be 'better served' by a dismissal." In re Eastman, 188 B.R. at 624
24 (emphasis added) (citations omitted). See 2 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶¶ 25 305.01 and 305.02 (15th ed. rev. 2009).

26 Focusing on economy of administration, the Receiver and the Bank note that the receivership has been in place since August 2008, and the Washington receivership statutes provide a mechanism for the equitable distribution of Orchards Village assets outside of bankruptcy.
If the Debtor's chapter 11 case continues, the administration of the Debtor's affairs will be in the hands of two courts, necessarily entailing some duplication of work and increased expenses of administration. Regency has improved operations and occupancy at 1 Orchards Village under the supervision of the Receiver, and the Receiver 2 and the Bank are concerned that the Debtor's bankruptcy filing could 3 destabilize operations at Orchards Village and upset residents and staff.

4           The Receiver has expressed the belief that the Debtor's chapter 5 11 filing was strategically designed "to slow down the Receiver's efforts 6 to liquidate the assets, which the Receiver is required to do" under the 7 Appointment Order. Memorandum of Law in Support of the Motion to 8 Dismiss, at p. 11. That belief is supported by the record. See Exhibit 9 144, at p. 1:

10           The receiver advises us that it intends to solicit 11 bids for an auction type sale. The receiver will 12 likely hire an independent consultant to establish a 13 minimum sales price for the facility. Preliminary 14 estimates are that the receiver may sell the facility
15 for as low as $14.5 million. A[] sale at this price 16 would pay the secured debt but leave nothing for the 17 unsecured debt or the owners.

18           The Debtor's concerns about recoveries for unsecured creditors and equity 19 holders in a "quick sale" scenario are underlined in a letter dated 20 February 6, 2009 from the Receiver to the Bank:

21           Originally it was our intention to have our auction 22 completed about this time and closing moving forward.
23 However, as we have discussed the markets for new 24 loans collapsed in September and October of last year.
25 That collapse created a delay since the potential 26 buyers and potential stalking horse candidates all reported the lenders were just not making any new loan commitments, or the loan commitments were so restrictive as to make a new purchase unreasonable.
Things have loosened up a great deal and it now appears we have some progress.

27           Exhibit 215, at p. 1. Despite the note of optimism in the last sentence 28 quoted above, Mr. Richard Hooper, the President of the Receiver, 29 testified at the Hearing that he has refused offers to sell Orchards

1 Village for the amount of total secured debt or less and is looking 2 forward to the appointment of a broker in the receivership who could 3 bring in 15-20 additional parties that might be interested in buying the 4 facility or investing in Orchards Village. He mentioned nothing about 5 any viable offers to purchase Orchards Village for any amount in excess 6 of secured debt.

7           Although the Debtor has asserted a value for the Orchards 8 Village real and personal property in its amended Schedules A and B that 9 projects to be in excess of $21,500,000 (see Exhibit 204, at pp. 1, 4), 10 Mr. James Guffee, Farmington's vice president for asset management, 11 testified at the Hearing that Farmington's current efforts to find 12 investors and/or buyers for Orchards Village have produced no buyer 13 interest at a level higher than the total of secured debt or below.

14           In these circumstances, while a relatively rapid sale in the 15 receivership may benefit secured creditors, from the record before me, it 16 appears that such a sale would leave unsecured creditors with a shortfall 17 and equity holders with nothing. What the Debtor wants through the 18 chapter 11 process is the opportunity to propose a plan, on a timetable 19 less rapid than a receivership sale, with potentially three components:
20 1) possible sale of Orchards Village; 2) possibly obtaining take-out 21 financing to satisfy all secured claims against Orchards Village; and/or 22 3) a reorganization of Orchards Village affairs that provides for 23 satisfaction or payment over time of all Orchards Village claims, 24 including residents' entrance fee deposits.

25           Based on the record of management of Orchards Village by 26 Farmington under the Management Agreement and OVP Lease prior to the

1 receivership, I find the prospects for a reorganization along the lines 2 of item 3 above dubious, but in light of the sale and financing situation 3 reflected in the Receiver's own analysis, as discussed above, I conclude 4 that it is in the best interests of the Debtor to give the Debtor an 5 opportunity to propose and attempt to confirm a plan in chapter 11.
6 Accordingly, I will deny the Motion to Dismiss under § 305(a) as not in 7 the interests of creditors and the Debtor, and I do not find "cause" to 8 dismiss under § 1112(b) at this time.

9           That does not mean, however, that I am prepared to require 10 "turnover" of the Orchards Village assets and business to the Debtor as a 11 debtor-in-possession under § 543(a), (b) and (c). Section 543(d)(1) 12 provides that turnover compliance may be excused "if the interests of 13 creditors and, if the debtor is not insolvent, of equity security holders 14 would be better served by permitting a custodian [the Receiver in this 15 case] to continue in possession, custody, or control of such property. .
16 . ."

17           Reorganization policy generally favors turnover of business 18 assets to the debtor in a chapter 11 case. See 5 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶
19 543.05 (15th ed. rev. 2009). If turnover is opposed, courts consider a 20 number of factors in determining whether to order turnover, including 21 "(1) whether there will be sufficient income to fund a successful 22 reorganization; (2) whether the debtor will use the property for the 23 benefit of its creditors; and (3) whether there has been mismanagement by 24 the debtor." Id. at 543-12. See, e.g., Dill v. Dime Savings Bank, FSB
25 (In re Dill), 163 B.R. 221, 225 (E.D.N.Y. 1994), and cases cited therein.

26           In this case, considering any of those three factors in light

1 of the evidentiary record of the Hearing, requiring turnover of the 2 assets and business operations of Orchards Village by the Receiver to the 3 Debtor is not appropriate. As to the availability of income to fund a 4 reorganization, the receivership action was precipitated by the Debtor's 5 failure to make payments on the Loan, failure to pay property taxes and 6 failure to pay the Orchards Village architects, who are owed over 7 $100,000 (see Exhibit 162, at p. 10), resulting in a mechanics lien being 8 placed on the Orchards Village property and a foreclosure action on that 9 lien being initiated. None of these Loan defaults has been cured.

10 Uncontradicted evidence was presented that Orchards Village
11 operations by Regency under the supervision of the Receiver have improved 12 substantially over operation by Farmington prior to the receivership.
13 Some of the improvements include 1) employment of a full-time registered 14 nurse "on call," as opposed to contracting for registered nurse services 15 through a staffing service; 2) employing two persons for marketing, as 16 opposed to Farmington's use of a single person for phone solicitations 17 and tours, who also performed maintenance and other services as needed; 18 and 3) employment under the receivership of a full-time activity director 19 and a full-time bus driver. This evidence tends to indicate that 20 Orchards Village under Farmington management simply did not have adequate 21 available revenue and working capital to run the facility as it should be 22 run.

23 Under the terms of the Appointment Order, the Bank is obligated 24 to advance funds to cover any shortfall in revenue from Orchards Village 25 to pay operating expenses. In fact, the Bank has advanced over $91,000 26 during the receivership proceedings to fund Orchards Village operations.

1 When asked at the beginning of the Hearing whether the Debtor would 2 present any evidence of available financing for its operation of Orchards
3 Village as a debtor-in-possession, Debtor's counsel advised the court 4 that the Debtor had no such financing, and no such evidence in fact was 5 presented.

6 The Debtor's own projections show Orchards Village operating at 7 a loss for the rest of 2009 and well into 2010. See Exhibit 207, at p.
8 1.

9 Regarding whether the Debtor would run Orchards Village for the 10 benefit of its creditors, the evidence tends to indicate that while the 11 Debtor would like to see all creditors paid, the primary motivation for 12 its chapter 11 filing is to protect the interests of equity holders. See 13 Exhibits 144, at pp. 1-2; Exhibit 145, at p. 2.

14 Finally, the evidentiary record reflects mismanagement of 15 Orchards Village prior to the receivership. First and foremost, during 16 the period that the Debtor was in default of its Loan obligations to the 17 Bank and was not paying other creditor obligations, including unpaid real 18 property taxes that by the time of the Debtor's bankruptcy filing had 19 accumulated to $299,009.38 (see Exhibit 162, at p. 10), Farmington 20 continued to make payments equating to an 11% return to some equity 21 investors that totaled over $74,000 during 2008. Mr. Chamberlain 22 admitted during his testimony that continuing to make those payments was 23 a "mistake." It certainly was not a reasonable exercise of business 24 judgment where the Debtor was not paying its debts as they became due in 25 the ordinary course of its business, as it obviously was not.

26 In addition, this case includes evidence of the regrettable

1 tendency toward proliferation of "special purpose entities." Such 2 entities have multiplied for several reasons: They provide expanded 3 opportunities to attract additional individual investors or investor 4 groups to invest in pieces of the action that would be more limited in 5 unitary transactions, and they also provide a web of entity shields to 6 protect individuals and assets from various liabilities. When handled in 7 sophisticated fashion, they can prove very useful, but handled less 8 artfully, they can create a mess. A case in point: Orchards Village 9 residents entered into "Residence Agreements" in the form of Exhibit 23, 10 pursuant to which they leased units at Orchards Village for a term that 11 may continue "for the lifetime of the RESIDENT." See Exhibit 23, at p.
12 2. The residents in some cases made substantial up-front payments 13 pursuant to these agreements: Eugene Rizzo testified that he paid 14 $200,000 under his Residence Agreement. The residents rely on the party 15 with which they contract to provide the services that they are paying 16 for, possibly for the rest of their lives. The only catch here is the 17 Residence Agreements that Farmington had residents sign identify the 18 "OWNER" leasing the unit to the resident as "Orchards Village, LLC." See 19 Exhibit 23, at p. 1. Orchards Village, LLC is not the Debtor; it is not 20 OVP; and it is not Farmington, although Farmington purports to act as its 21 agent. Id. Mr. Chamberlain testified that as far as he knew, Orchards 22 Village, LLC, the lessor to residents at Orchards Village under the 23 Residence Agreements, does not even exist!

24 In addition, Mr. Hooper testified that the Receiver never was 25 able to obtain all of the requested financial records from the pre-26 receivership management of Orchards Village, and as noted above, the 1 Debtor cannot even keep its unit ownership records straight, during a 2 period when there was no evidence presented that any ownership units in 3 the Debtor were being bought and sold.

4 Mr. Chamberlain testified that the Debtor's bankruptcy filing 5 was not intended to disrupt the progress made by Regency and the Receiver 6 at Orchards Village, and his intent in behalf of the Debtor was to leave 7 them in place. Concerns have been expressed by the Debtor as to the 8 costs of the receivership, but a mechanism has been in place to object to 9 the fees and costs of the Receiver and its professionals in Washington 10 Superior Court each month during the receivership, and there was no
11 evidence presented at the Hearing that any objection to the Receiver's 12 fees and costs ever had been submitted to the Washington Superior Court.

13 The evidence submitted at the Hearing is more than ample to 14 deny turnover of the assets and business operations of Orchards Village 15 from the Receiver to the Debtor pursuant to § 543(d).

16 d) The Debtor's Cash Collateral Motion will be denied.

17 Under the Cash Collateral Motion, the Debtor requests interim
18 approval of use of the Bank's cash collateral to maintain the Receiver 19 and to pay for Regency's services in operating Orchards Village, while 20 precluding use of cash collateral to pay the Receiver and its 21 professionals for fees and costs generated by them in proceedings before 22 this court. To provide adequate protection to the Bank, the Debtor 23 proposes that the Bank receive a replacement lien on postpetition cash 24 collateral. The Debtor does not propose any adequate protection to the 25 second lien holder, the successor in interest to Pinnacle Bank, Clark 26 County for delinquent real property taxes, or LSR Architects for its

1 mechanics lien. As previously noted, the Debtor did not present any 2 evidence at the Hearing that it had any source of financing for its 3 operations other than revenues from Orchards Village. In addition, the 4 Debtor's own projections reflect continuing losses from operations at 5 Orchards Village through the end of 2009 and into 2010.

6 In the absence of a court order authorizing a debtor-in-7 possession to use a secured creditor's cash collateral, a debtor-in-8 possession may not use such cash collateral without the secured 9 creditor's consent. § 363(c)(2). In this case, the Bank opposes the 10 Debtor's use of its cash collateral.

11 As a threshold matter, the Bank argues that there is no "cash 12 collateral" for the Debtor to use because the Debtor's only right to 13 payments from operations of Orchards Village would be its right to 14 receive rent under the Lease with OVP. However, under Section 2.1 of the 15 Lease, the obligation of OVP to pay rent to the Debtor is abated until 16 Orchards Village achieves "Stabilization," under a formula set forth 17 therein. See Exhibit 118, at pp. 2-3. All parties agree that Orchards 18 Village to date has not achieved "Stabilization" for purposes of the 19 Lease, and the Debtor's right to receive rent under the Lease continues 20 abated. Accordingly, the Debtor may be hoist on the petard of its OVP 21 special purpose entity.

22 However, even if the Debtor could get around the problems 23 inherent in the complicated ownership structure of Orchards Village, on 24 the evidentiary record before me, the Debtor has not met its burden to 25 establish that it can provide adequate protection for the use of secured 26 creditors' cash collateral if I authorize such use. See 3 Collier on 1 Bankruptcy ¶ 363.03[4] at 363-33 (15th ed. rev. 2009). I will deny the 2 Cash Collateral Motion, and consistent with my decision not to require 3 turnover, I will leave the Receiver in place to manage the assets and 4 operations of Orchards Village as authorized under the Appointment Order, 5 subject to the Debtor's right to propose and seek confirmation of a plan 6 in chapter 11.

7 I realize that this decision leaves the Debtor without a 8 readily available source of funds to pay administrative expenses in its 9 chapter 11 case. In effect, the equity owners of the Debtor will be 10 required to "pay to play" in bankruptcy court, unless and until the 11 Debtor can get a chapter 11 plan confirmed. I do not find this result 12 inequitable because it leaves the Receiver and Regency in place to 13 continue their effective management and operation of Orchards Village, 14 and the record reflects that the Debtors' members have considered already 15 the possibility that they might be required to contribute "a significant 16 amount of new capital." See Exhibit 144, at p. 2; Exhibit 145, at p. 2.

17 Conclusion

18 Based on the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, 19 I will deny the Motion to Dismiss to the extent that it requests 20 dismissal of the Debtor's chapter 11 case, but I will not require the 21 Receiver to turn over the assets and business operations of Orchards 22 Village to the Debtor. I further will deny the Cash Collateral Motion.
23 The court will enter an order consistent with this Memorandum Opinion. I 24 will hold a case management conference for this case on May 7, 2009 at 25 9:00 a.m.
